Ethics and Iguerance.

April 21, 1891, tf.

When medical men get together we not infrequently see notices of the subserviency of the members to the code of "ethics."

The American Medical Association recently met in Washington, and one of the most pro.ninent things noted in the report of their meeting is "ethics." The word seems to be a prominent one in the mouths of many doctors, and even if they had the power to save a patient, it seems that they would not do so except by an observance of the "ethics of the

The "ethics" are a few rules, which seem to be adopted for no better purpose than that of preventing a truly able and well informed physician from letting the suffering or afflicted people know anything of his learning or skill in the healing art.

We are further convinced that this rule must have been adopted by, as it seems to be enforced by, the more ignorant and the less skilfull of their profession, from the fact that the more ignorant the physician, and the less he is presumed to know of medicine, the more certain he is to have the word pat, ready for use on any and all occasions, where there may be a demand for reason and common sense in the skillful practice of his profession. Did the reader ever see an "old field doctor" who didn't talk learnedly on ethics, while avoiding the question of medicine. The ignorance of the man which would lead him to prescribe a course of luna caustic for the patient which he is almost sure to kill would prompt him to prescribe ergot with an equal recklessness which might bring immediate death, or entail untold suffering on his victim, would prompt him to talk learnedly about the "ethics" of the profession of which he knows so little. While, of course, there are honorable exceptions in both professions, yet we do think | 50. that there is a greator lack of intelligence, times among the preachers and the doctors, than in any other of the learned professions azine or newspaper, except a so-called cause to regret it. This class of so-called preachers and al- zet the bonds. leged medical men, it may be, excuse themevents of the world, on the ground that they part, that we were untrustworthy. are too busy, or are too much engrossed in the practice of their profession to read anything but some antiquated text-book, or some alleged medical journal, whose advertising pages and editorial columns are largely filled offs of ouack medicines.

The spread of the gospel and the saving of souls is accomplished by practical methods, and the good results of the practice of medicine are brought about not only by a theoretical knowledge of men and medicine, but by an actual acquaintance with both, so we think that no preacher and no doctor is well qualified for the practice of his profession, who entirely cuts himself off from the remainder of the world. Such withdrawal dwarfs the intellect, and limits the capacity to grapple with the great questions of saving souls and preserving human life. Then, according to our way of thinking, the preacher and the doctor who reads and sees nothing of the world, except in his own narrow sphere, is poorly equipped for the practice of his profession.

We do not know of a single doctor, or of any preacher, who has attained eminence, who does not read other books and other pa. pers than superannuated text books, and humbug medical advertising sheets. Therefore, the preacher or doctor who reads nothing except professional books and papers, makes a most damaging admission to the more intelligent part of the community which he serves. The day has passed when the learned professions can rely for their success upon the ignorance and superstition of the people.

From "ethics" and ignorant doctors may the ministering angels defend us!

Publishing Their Ailments.

We are in receipt of a patent medicine circular, which gives the names of "some of the newspapers, the editors and publishers of which have sent for — Home Treat-ment and have advertised the same." In papers in South Carolina.

We have always understood that the secrets of a doctor's office were sacred and inviolable. the Press and Banner may be hereafter ex-If the frailties of our brethren are to be pub- cused from signing papers, as we do not exlished in this way, it should be a warning to others. We know personally a number of the editors of the papers mentioned, and we are surprised to learn that they are not in good health, and we are also surprised that they would give their advertising space for a prescription from a patent medicine ven-

Editor Bailey. Editor Bailey of Greenville commends our County Commissioners for publishing the poll list, and thinks the same publication in Greenville might do good. If Editor Bailey would see School Commissioner Bailey, and make arrangement to pay the printer, as did the School Commissioner in Abbeville County, we have no doubt that the printers in Greenville would publish the list.

The grand jury in New Orleans found no findictment against anybody for the killing of Italians in New Orleans. It was honest in them to do so. To have indicted anybody would have been a mockery and a cheat. Speaking for the Press and Banner, we think the lynchers should have gone further, and put some of the jurors to death, as they did

It would have been eminently proper and right for the city of Columbia to have had a public meeting, to which all the people of the State might have been invited.

It would have been right for the city to have given a banquet to the members of the Legislature, and it would have been proper for the State officers to have been invited to that banquet.

But we have seen no good reason assigned which would put the different counties under tribute for such an entertainment as is now woing on in Columbia.

After Captain Parks.

For some time, we were puzzled to know why the Cumberland Gap should talk about going to Green wood, except to scare us at Abbeville, and we still believe that is about all the substantial reason which can be assigned for that movement, but it is barely possible that the ghost of that old road which may never be built,—remembering his opposition of old—isafter Capt. Death of Colonel Hammett. Death of Colonel Hammett.

In the death of Col. H. P. Hammett, which event occurred at his home in Greenville last Friday morning, the State has lost a useful and an honored citizen. He struggled against adverse fortune in his youth, and finally conquered a great success. He was the founder and builder of the Pickinont factory, which is perhaps the largest and best instituwhich is perhaps the largest and best instituions of the kind in the State. Afterwards, n connection with that factory he took charge of a mill in the city of Greenville and made it a success where failure had preceded him. In the manufacturing or cotton mill industry Mr. Hammett was a pioneer, being OFF TO THE CENTENNIAL. the first man in the State to demonstrate the practicability of such enterprises. His influence was felt in the character of the operaives, who were noted for their high integrity nd thrift. His life was an example in morality, and ne gave evidences of his earnestness in a desire for the spiritual and moral welfare of he operatives, by providing for them the ervices of a minister and a teacher.

Mr. Hammett was nature's nobleman, an nonest man; and in a long life he never ought to do any man injury in good name or estate, but was always ready to give a help ng hand to any who may have needed it.

Signing Petitions.

People are frequently called upon to sign petitions of various sorts, and very often the citizen is placed in an embarrassing situa tion. The pelitioner appeals to a neighbor who is friendly enough, but who does not like to take unnecessary steps to exclude other equally good friends from a chance at getting the same.

As a matter of fact, we think editors ough not to be asked to sign petitions of any sort. that list appears the names of twenty news. In the discharge of their duty as editors they should not be embarrassed or committed For this reason, we trust that the editor of pect to sign any more.

If the Centennial is a State affair why were the members of the Legislature not assigned a place?

If it is a State celebration, in which all the counties are specially interested, why is it that committees from the different counties were not appointed?

If any man from Abbeville has received other notice than the printed invitations to be present, and the nagging which we have got in reference to the arches, we do not know of the fact.

It would have been eminently proper and right for the city of Columbia to have had a severely interested. Instead of taking the body to the correct.

The State.

The State will appreciate our situation, and understand us when we say that we are in different as to whether Abbeville erects an arch. It would afford the Press and Banner plensure to spend a part of the time at the capital City during the Centennial, and we will do so, if our basiness arrangements suit. THE CONNIE MAXWELL ORPHANAGE.

What an Edgefield Contemporary Has to Say of it.

Edgefield Chronicle. In our opinion, an orphan assylum is the noblest manifestation of christian civilization. Therefore we cannot too much admire or, commend the action of the Baptist church of South Carolina in determining to establish such an institution. Nor can we too hearty congratulate our fair neighbor Greenwood upon her laudable and successful ambition to securing the site of the assum. It is hearty congratulate our fair neighbor Greenwood upon her laudable and successful ambition in securing the site of the asylum. It is to be called the "Connie Maxwell Orphanage." "Connie" was the name of the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Maxwell, of Greenwood, a beautiful and idolized child who died in her infancy. Mrs. Maxwell is an Edgefield woman—of the Richardson family; and therefore this pretty name comes home to allour hearts. Of course we take it for granted that most people know, before this, that Dr. and Mrs. Maxwell have bequeathed almost their entire estate to this institution.

The sub-committee appoited by the Orphanage, Committee, for the purpose of locating the building site of the Connie Maxwell Orphanage to be established at Greenwood, met in that town lately, and, after a careful canvass of several available sites, selected one on Dr. Maxwell's farm, about one mile from the centre of the town. This site is an admirable one, and is situated on the new-cut road west of Greenwood, and south of the road.
The committee, tto make the site complete, purchased about ten acres of land north of this road and joining the lands upon which they will build. The committee, after long discussion and a very manifest feeling of the importance of the selection they were about to make, were enthusiastically unanimous in this decision. The present prospect is that a superintendent will not be elected at present, but that the Rev. J. L. Vass, of Darlingten, chairman of the Orphanage Committee, will run the work, as best he can, until the next meeting of the convention. Mr. Vass says:

"We will begin to build soon. We can't build without money. We believe the Lord."

next meeting of the convenience says:

"We will begin to build soon. We can't build without money. We believe the Lord will put it into the hearts of his people to give it to us. This work has already received many marks of Divine favor. If the Lord be with us, surely we will succeed. If he be not with us, we will and should full."

EDGEFIELD, May 6.—A large force of hands arrived in town on last Tuesday, and under the supervision of Contracter Potts, the grading on the extension of Carolina, Cumberland Gap and Chicago line is in full operation and being rapidly pushed. I have been reliably informed that it has been definitely settled to run the road through to Greenwood.—Correspondence News and Courier. It is to be hoped now, that we will be bothered no more about our bonds.

Alliance Pienie. Ben Terrell, the National Alliance Lecturer, will deliver a public address at Abbeville town. on Tuesday, June 2, at eleven o'clock. The public are cordially invited to attend.
